

WAKE UP AMERICA DRIVE THIS WEEK

Strong Organization Is Being Perfected to Launch Campaign Which Opens Thursday.

GO OVER TOP FIRST DAY

That is What Rev. J. W. Abel, County Chairman, Hopes to Do If the People Will Support Movement.

More than 50 names have been placed on the incomplete list of team captains to lead in the drive to raise $25,000 in Tulsa county for the relief of sufferers in the near east, and others will be added before the opening of the drive on Thursday.

The plan of the management is to have the force large enough so that the task may be as light as possible on all. The Rev. J. W. Abel, county chairman, said yesterday that if the people respond in the spirit which this worthy cause justifies, there will be no trouble in going over the top the first day, but to do so will be difficult because the men appointed are not to have the force large enough so that the task may be as light as possible on all.

Log Cabin Inn "Capital."

For the first nine years of the national existence of the Cherokee nation, the capital was located in a log cabin in the center of the country, at Tishomingo.

Under the provision of an act of November 19, 1847, each house was domed in a hewed log building 20 feet square with a brick chimney, floured, oiled, and comfortable.

These were located in the northwest and northeast corners of the square, and built at a contract price of $250 each.

At the council for the following year, provisions were made for the erection of similar buildings in the other two corners of the square for the offices of the chief and treasurer.

These buildings served the Cherokee nation as capital until after the civil war when a commodious brick building, which is now the Cherokee county courthouse, was built.

While the Cherokee buildings were housed in these four log buildings that cost $800 in the aggregate, the higher school buildings were more expensive.

On November 12, 1847, two days after the act providing for the first two of these log capital buildings was adopted, the necessary appropriations were made for the erection, at cost of $100,000 each, of the Cherokee National Male seminary and the Cherokee National Female seminary.

This system completely revolutionizes the piping industry owing to the economy it brings about in saving which may reach 60 per cent of the cost of construction.

Further, it allows of the resistance to all pressure up to 1,500 pounds per square inch, and enables one to guarantee a general 24 hours service, which is the length of piping at the maximum pressure required.

It is also the best way to make the pipe last longer.

Cherokees Still Writing Romance Even Though It Is 21 Years Since Their Nation Ended Its Existence

By DR. EMMET STARKE.

OKLAHOMA, June 21.—Twenty-one years ago on June 20, 1838, the government of the Cherokee nation ceased its existence under the provisions of the "Treaty of 1830." We hardly realize it until our attention is called to the fact and then if we summon up our memory to recall the events which were still alive, but had been started off by the late nation, we remember in habe a full realization of the demoralizing hand of time.

The Cherokee nation, formed by junction of the eastern and western Cherokees in the consolidation of the country, in September, 1832, numbered 12,000, and in 1838, in which all of the officers were elected for two-year terms, except the chief, assistant-chief, treasurer, supreme and circuit judges.

The annual session of the legislature met at Tahlequah on the first Monday in November.

Three Chiefs Living.

The three living chiefs of the Cherokee nation are C. J. Harris of Muskogee, Samuel H. Mayes of Preston and Thomas M. Huntington of Vinita. There is no surviving assistant chief.

The other elective officers who are still living are Treasurers Robert H. Ross of Tahlequah, C. J. Harris and Dr. Jesse C. Bushhead of Claremore; Senators Jefferson Murkpat, J. H. Hastings, William T. Davis, Mark Lamont, Joseph Yeatman, David W. Baggsdale, John H. Laugh, Ellis H. Alberly, Jacob L. England, Simon Wadsworth, Edward Morgan, R. P. Moore, C. J. Harris, John Brown, Lewis Cookson, George C. Sanders, Everett E. West, C. H. E. Brewer Jr., William McLean, Walter S. Agnew, Charles E. Yunn, James Harrel, Benjamin G. Fletcher, Richard L. Franklin, George W. Ferguson, John Wright, Riley W. Lindsey, Joel L. Raugh, John T. Gunter, W. E. Sands and R. H. Mayes, clerks of the senate; Joshua Ross, John W. Thompson, A. C. Noland, W. P. Thompson, Charles W. Willey, Richard M. Wolfe, Samuel F. Parks, Edward N. Washburn, Joel L. Raugh.

FRENCH CONTRACTOR HEARS OF SPAVINAW

Leon Billie Writes From Europe Asking for Chance to Bid on the Work.

Tulsa's proposition of bringing the mountain spring water from Spavinaw to the city, is also being discussed with interest throughout the United States and even in far-off France. Letters arrive daily from all parts of the country congratulating the city on its proposed step, while contractors to all the greater cities of the United States are getting in their bids for the construction work.

The following letter received yesterday to Mayor C. H. Hubbard from Leon Billie, one of the most famous contractors of water system work in France, is evidence enough that Tulsa, through the circulation of The World in that country, is attracting world wide interest in connection with its water problem.

To the Honorable Mayor and Council of the city of Tulsa, Oklahoma: Gentlemen—I beg to draw your kind attention upon the subject of my system which would vary according to the importance of the pipe lines. ERAKTERINODAR, Southern Russia, Tuesday, June 17.—The forces of General Denekine, the anti-bolshevik leader in southern Russia, are advancing rapidly toward the Volga in pursuit of the demoralized soviet troops. The Denekine forces are within 20 miles of Tsaritsin on the Volga, south of Saratov.

Fifty thousand Bolsheviks, it is reported, are fleeing in panic toward the holding of the Willard-Dempsey fight July 4.

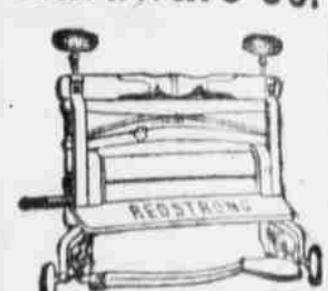

and have passed Slaviansk, leaving rolling stock behind them.

To the northeast on the Donets-Tsaritsin railway, General Denekine's troops have captured four howitzers, 15 machine guns and thousands of rifles.
